

ABOUT RABBI SUSSMAN

Rabbi Sussman is Senior Rabbi of Reform Congregation Keneseth Israel Synagogue in Elkins Park, PA. He has taught Jewish History at Princeton and Temple University and offers classes at the National Museum of American Jewish History. He has written several books in the field of American Jewish history, is published in major print and online publications and is featured in several PBS television documentaries on Jewish life in America. Previously, Rabbi Sussman served as Chair of Jewish Studies Department at Binghamton University-SUNY and offered courses in Jewish History at Hebrew Union College in New York City and Rutgers University.

Rabbi Sussman is the President of the Association for Progressive Judaism, an independent Think Tank. Sussman serves as a Trustee of the Katz Center for Advanced Judaic Studies at the University of Pennsylvania, the Delaware Valley College, and the American Jewish Historical Society. He is an active member of the Academic Advisory and Editorial Board of the American Jewish Archives (Cincinnati).

Joan Myerson Shrager is a digital artist whose work is in the collections of the University of Pennsylvania and Drexel University. She is a former gallery owner/director and co-directs The Stained Glass Project: Windows That Open Doors, an art program for inner city students. Ms. Shrager is the sole illustrator of Rabbi Sussman's lectures.

Single lectures and series are both available.
Each presentation has an average of 50 slides.
Rabbi Sussman narrates each presentation with customized historical lectures that are always well received.
