About the Ketubah

This Jewish marriage agreement is considered an integral part of a Jewish wedding. It records the date and place of the wedding and the sacred vows exchanged by the couple. Prices range from $150-$300.

“Mystic Jerusalem” ketubah is a potpourri of color, texture and coolness. It is a fanciful and optimistic rendition of Jerusalem - by Mickie Caspi

“Dreamcatcher” is composed of delicate floral “Hamsas” symbolizing the divine potential of a loving marriage and blessings of protection from harm - by Amy Fagin.

“To Everything There is a Season”, a laser-cut, paper cut ketubah represents the seasons of the year within an outer border of earth, sea, the heavens and the sky - by Karen Shain Schloss.

“Celestial Jerusalem” ketubah is a pastiche of color and texture, a fanciful rendition of Jerusalem that is blessed by doves of peace - by Mickie Caspi.

“Woodland Canopy” ketubah, a pairing of strength, and an image of two family trees uniting - by Betsy Platkin Teutsch.

“Four Trees” is a celebration of the marriage vows today and the promise of a future together represented by the seasons to come - by Mickie Caspi.
